

Dear Gloria,

I wanted to thank you. Your emails of encouragement and suggestions were the driving force and the overwhelming feeling of hope which allowed me to remain focused in my relentless search for employment in this very difficult marketplace. Your timely notes gave me the confidence to believe in myself and drive me to new levels of success and happiness.

Even though I was not fortunate to take advantage of the funding for the Project Management program at Stony Brook University, I undertook the program anyway. This was instrumental in me attaining a better paying and more exciting position with greater benefits. This new position is allowing me to pursue my lifetime goals and dreams which I had gave up on some time ago.

I received a verbal offer and am going in tomorrow to solidify the position and sign the necessary paper work.

I will be in a position of great power and would love to give back and be a resource for you in the future.

I will notify you once I am settled in with my new contact information.
Thank you again and I look forward to chatting with you soon.

Regards,
Mark G.
